

Point Ellice House

Gold Rush Magnate and Commissioner Peter O'Reilly acquired Point Ellice House in 1867 and turned it into a gathering spot for Victoria's social elite. In 1975, three generations later, O'Reilly's grandson, John, and his wife, Inez, sold the house and all of its contents to the province of B.C. The family left behind everything - from armoires to tea services, a harp, clothing, writing desks, board games, kitchen utensils, and more - giving us a rare opportunity to see one of North America's largest collections of Victoriana in its original, privileged Victorian home.

This Property, overlooking the waters of Victoria's scenic Gorge Waterway, is both museum and refuge. Now surrounded by industry, it still exudes the peace of its former quiet setting.

Today the house and grounds are open to the public throughout the year. Tea is served in the garden during the summer and in O'Reilly's Restaurant for the rest of the year. Special Events such as birthday parties and weddings can also be arranged.

Projects and Programs that need your financial support include:

- ❖ The ongoing maintenance of the heritage buildings.
- ❖ Restoration and expansion of the heritage gardens.
- ❖ Cataloguing of the collection and artifacts.
- ❖ Expanded community outreach and school programs about the role of Point Ellice House in Victoria's history.

Members can help shape the future of this historic jewel by voting for, or acting on, the volunteer Board of Directors. Your support will help us ensure that this heritage property remains open for the enjoyment of present and future generations of Victorians and visitors to our city.
